RANDOLPH

Baccalaureate Sermon Before Randolph High School Seniors.

Music hall was well filled on Sunday night to listen to the opening services of commencement week of the Randolph high school, the occasion being the baccalaureate sermon before the class which was an interesting and scholarly address delivered by the Rev. Fraser Metzger. The music for the occasion was furnished by a ladies quartet, composed of Misses Blanche Sparhawk, Althea Bailey, Minnie Barbour and Lucile Grant and was as follows: "Holy Art Thou," "O Shepherd of Israel" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul," all of which was given in a manner to please all lovers of good music. The decorations were simple and beautiful and the entire evening was a pleasant introduction to the closing exercises.

Mrs. G. W. Douglas went to Windsor Saturday morning to attend the funeral of her cousin, Mrs. Webster.

Charles Bent, who is employed in bridge building in Massachusetts is now here for a short vacation with his family.

Fred Packard will shortly move his family from the house on South Main street to the farm of Mrs. Paul Wagner in Braintree for the summer.

Mrs. Sarah Thompson is now established as housekeeper at the sanatorium and Mrs. Ada Spaulding, who has been there for the last few months, is at work for the present in the Marshall meat market.

Mrs. W. H. Roberts, who had been with her mother, Mrs. Lyman Hutchins, for two weeks, returned to her home in Manchester the last of the week and another daughter, Mrs. Mary Hutchins, Thresher, of Melrose Highlands, came for a two weeks' stay to assist in the care of her mother.

At a largely attended meeting of the Federated church last week certain subjects of interest were discussed and a committee of three appointed to decide the nature of the service to be held and provide the same. This committee was composed of Rev. J. W. Hamilton, Mr. Lewis and Dr. Bailey. Dr. Angell and Miss Cooper were also elected solicitors and Miss Cooper, Miss Wadleigh and C. N. Stockwell a committee to attend to the organization of a young people's society which shall hold their meetings at 6:15 o'clock Sunday evening. No definite reply has yet been received from Rev. P. C. Richardson to whom a call has been extended.

Children's day was observed on Sunday morning at Bethany church with a large audience in attendance. The services were composed of song and recitation from members of the Sunday school which proved very interesting. One pleasing feature of the service was the introduction of a professional by the children who entered singing each bearing ferns before being seated near the platform. Dr. E. O. Blanchard the superintendent presided during the service. The little son of Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Adams and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Adams and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Osha were baptized at the close of the service.

MONTPELIER

Sylvester Mahoney has been bound over to county court in September for furnishing intoxicating liquors. His mother furnished bail for him in the sum of $500, and he was released from custody.

The Montpelier Military band orchestra has engagements for commencement exercises at Montpelier high school, Norwich university, Middlebury college, Goddard seminary and Spaulding high school at Barre.

The Luther G. Howard Sons company of Bellows Falls, with a capital stock of $50,000, organized for the purpose of dealing in real estate, filed yesterday articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state.

In city court yesterday the civil cases of Eugene Chausse of Burlington vs. George Caudle to recover $183 as commission in a real estate deal was discontinued and an order was made for the defendant to recover his costs. The case may later be brought in county court.

During the month of May only 15 cases were heard in city court against 45 in the same month a year ago. Last year 29 intoxication cases were heard by this court in May, this year only 7. The closing of the three-mile bridge saloon is credited with at least a part of this deficit.

The program for commencement exercises at the high school was issued yesterday. These will be held at the opera house Wednesday evening, June 16, Harold Teden is salutatorian and Miss Ruth Brown, valedictorian. The class day exercises, Monday evening, June 14, in the East State building, will include a farce, "The Defeat of the Fikes," written by Supt. F. J. Brown-scombe.

BETHEL

Fred Putnam has returned home from Worcester, Mass., and will conduct his farm on Royallton hill.

Mrs. Edna Querin of Bedford, N. Y., has been passing the week here and returned to her work on Monday.

The address of the Hon. Mason S. Stone on Memorial day was very interesting and instructive and thoroughly appreciated by the audience present.

Miss Maud Abbott, a teacher in Whitcomb high school, is entertaining her mother from Dorchester, Mass., who will remain with her till the close of the school.

The funeral of Mrs. Ben Bundy, who died June 1, after an illness of about four months, was held on Thursday at 1 o'clock, the Rev. J. Wesley Miller officiating, and interment was in the family lot in the Lyman cemetery.

The Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church gave "Mrs. Briggs of the Poetry Yard" before a large audience last week. The net proceeds amounted to about $100. The parts were taken by the young people of town, all of which were very well sustained throughout and a credit to all.

News of the death of Miss Sarah M. Gay of Boston reached here on Friday and the remains were brought here on Monday and taken to the family lot in Stockbridge for interment. Miss Gay had reached the age of 39 years and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Gay of Gayville. Since the death of her parents she has resided in Boston, and for several years has been active in mission work conducted by the Church of the Ascension. For a year she has suffered intensely from a complication of diseases which finally terminated in her death. She is survived by one brother, Nelson Gay of Boston, and one adopted brother, John Gay of the same city.

WILLIAMSTOWN

Funeral of Mrs. Gracia Martin Was Held Yesterday Afternoon.

The funeral services of Gracia Smith Martin were held yesterday afternoon at the home of her son-in-law, Henry M. Stewart, and there was a large attendance of friends and relatives. Mrs. Martin, who died on Friday night at the age of 87 years, had been tenderly cared for by her only surviving daughter, Mrs. Fannie Stewart. The Rev. D. H. Strong of the Williamstown Congregational church, of which the deceased was a member, officiated, and the choir sang two selections. The bearers were John Lynde, George Lynde, Eugene Call and Fred Whiting. Burial was in the family lot in the village cemetery.

Eugene Fellows was in Orange and Topsham over Sunday.

Neal Godfrey is now the regular bookkeeper at Almetti & Co's granite office.

Miss Cloke, a trained nurse, is caring for Dr. Watson during his prolonged illness.

Have your flags ready for the 14th, which is "flag day." Mrs. Fellows will supply your needs in the flag line.

All persons using the "dumping ground" are requested to put their rubbish in the cellar hole provided by the town for that purpose.

The union services at the Congregational church were well attended yesterday, and the presentation of the work of the Vermont Bible society by Rev. O. S. Sherburne, secretary of the society, was an interesting subject of discourse.

MAGAZINE REVIEW.

The work of Rudolf Duhkoop, probably the most popular portrait photographer in Germany, furnishes the leading pictorial feature of the issue. Several beautiful reproductions, exemplify the great variety of his successful characterizations and the wide scope of his genius in technique. Accompanying these is an intensely interesting article telling the life-story, methods and achievements of this gifted artist written by his friend E. O. Hoppe, F. R. P. S.

Following this Phil M. Riley contributes a comprehensive outline of the possibilities in "Making Photography Profitable," treating the making of photographs for magazine covers and advertising. A. E. Sawyer describes an ingenious method of making "Enlarged Copies Direct," while George H. Scheer, M. D. begins an important series "On the Rendering of Color-Values," in which is fully treated the bathing of ordinary plates so that they will record color-values correctly.

The eight regular departments are brim-full of practical and interesting information as usual, a special feature being an invaluable series of articles on "composition" for the beginner. This month's installment is devoted to "The Line." Price 15 cents of news or photo-supply dealers.

Chinese Drama—Some of Its Peculiarities

Every Chinese play in this country begins at half past six or a quarter to seven. The audience does not commence to arrive until eight; therefore the actors play to bare boards for more than an hour. No reason for this—it has always been; that to a Chinese is enough. On the night of the Haw Shou, they abridge the main play a little to make room for their act of faith.

At a quarter of seven, therefore, the musicians are tuning up in their alcove; from back of the wooden partition, where the actors are making up, sound many voices in the singsong inflection of the Cantonese dialect. A dignified Chinese takes a seat beside the stage entrance to the left, and sets himself before a drum made from a gourd. Upon this he sounds a preliminary tattoo with two drumsticks. He is the prompter and stage manager, from the rhythm of his tattoo, both actors and musicians take their cues. Another Chinese in plain clothes steps into the foreground. He is the property man and active stage director, who wanders continually during the action, setting out properties, arranging costumes, seeing that everything is shipshape. The eye of Chinese imagination regards him as inviolable.

As suddenly as an explosion, the gongs sound out a great, booming note; and through the right entrance comes a gorgeous procession. First are two "women" in plain black, with sacred fillets of red dropping from their temples; then six men in long robes that blaze with scarlet and gold, in sweeping, artificial stage heads that cover the mouth, and in curious antique bonnets. These are gods of the Chinese pantheon, and the women are worshippers. The gongs finish the "god motif," the little fiddle takes up a monotonous theme, and the women sing in unison a holy chant. Suddenly they protrude themselves on the platform, and the gods, in deep, muffled voices, take up the refrain. From this beginning they enact a short play whose moral is our "Peace on Earth, Good Will toward Men," and whose theme is the reward of the just.

The prompter rattles his sticks again; the Haw Shou is over, and the drama of "Seven in the Family, Kind-hearted the Whole Lot" is on.—Will Irwin, in the June Everybody's.

One Type of "Business Integrity."

A man whose life until recently has been spent as a solicitor for South Water street houses recently said to me: "Nobody outside the street knows how rotten this business is. Of course there are some square houses and some houses that are squarer than others, but the business of the street as a whole is honeycombed with shameful and dishonest practices and rests on a basis of fraud, trickery and crooked dealing."

"Once I went with the boss to the Michigan grape district to solicit business," he continued. "The crop was far enough along so that we could tell about what to expect from any vineyard we inspected. Prospects were good and the boss was out for a big killing."

"One day we came to a little house which was surrounded by a splendid vineyard heavy with growing fruit; it had been well cared for, and there was no doubt that the crop would be extra choice. A sad-eyed woman came to the door in answer to our knock, and the boss asked her for her husband. She swallowed hard and finally managed to say that she had buried him the Sunday before. After talking sympathetically with her for a while the boss told her he'd like to handle her crop."

"It's all I've got in the world," she answered, "and I must take care to get every cent possible out of it. I can't afford to make any mistake, you know—it isn't as if I still had Tom to take care of me."

"I know the boss was a mighty practical old pirate, but the way he talked to that poor widow completely pulled the wool over my eyes and convinced me that he really had a soft spot in his heart and would give her a square deal, as he promised. Well, she sent the grapes to us, and they were fine—brought a fancy price. When the girl was making up the accounts and the checks for that week, she called out to the boss and asked: 'How about Mrs. W.'?"

"Pay her at the rate of nine cents," I was simply astounded, for I had sold the shipment myself and knew that the price he named was a straight "kick-down" of three or four cents. Then it occurred to me that perhaps he had forgotten the circumstances in connection with the shipment, and so I said:

"Jim, don't you remember that she's the woman who buried her husband the Sunday before we called?"
